

GIJ08

Allan Harraden, UK, started working with ITN in 1980 with minicams and covert equipment. He has worked worldwide in designing and installing camera systems onto boats, planes, trains and helicopters and has worked alongside the Armed Forces.

Rana Samir al-Sabbagh is executive director for Arab Reporters for Investigative Journalism (ARIJ), the first Arab network offering media support for investigative journalists and editors in Jordan, Syria, Lebanon and now Egypt.

Liv Inger Somby is a Saami journalist from Kárášjohka/Karasjok, Norway. She is TV and radio journalist and has worked in Norway, Sweden and Russia. Somby is now working as senior advisor for Gáldu, The Resource Centre for the Rights of Indigenous Peoples.

Jodi Rave is a national reporter and columnist who cover Native American issues for 58 newspapers in 22 states for Lee Enterprises newspapers. Rave started working out of the Missoulian newspaper in Missoula, Mont., after completing a 2004 Nieman fellowship at Harvard University.

Igor Kudrik (1974) was the head of Norwegian environmental NGO Bellona's office in Murmansk, Russia, from 1994 till 1996. He has been working with nuclear safety issues in Russia and Bellona web development.

Alexander Nikitin, Chairman of the board Environmental Right Centre Bellona (ECR Bellona) in St. Petersburg. Nikitin is a graduate of the Leningrad Naval Academy, where he obtained a degree in nuclear engineering.

Jevgenij Kirillov a Saami journalist from Lujavvri (Lovozero), North-West Russia. He works at the Kola Sami Radio at the Kola Peninsula. As well, he's producing TV reportages for Sami News (Oddasat), which is broadcasted in Norway, Sweden and Finland.

Michael Gillard has written for the Mail on Sunday, Sunday Times, Financial Times, The Guardian and Private Eye magazine as well as being involved in producing documentaries for BBC radio and Channel 4 television.

Sarah Wykes is a senior campaigner for Global Witness in UK. During a trip to Angola in 2007 she was arrested on charges of spying while investigating corruption in the oil-industry. Wykes holds a Ph.d in Hispanic studies.

Jens Weinreich is the sports editor of Berliner Zeitung, is an investigative journalist and author. In 2005 he was awarded the prestigious "Waechterpreis" for his investigative journalism which led to the discovery of the financial scandals during the Leipzig bid for the Olympic Games 2012.

Stefano Valentino is a Brussels-based freelance reporter covering both EU issues through his own newswire and global issues through field reporting worldwide. In 2006 he was awarded with the Citigroup "Excellency in Financial Journalism".

Tom Heinemann, 48 has been working as an independent investigative journalist – and with his own production company - for more than 17 years. Heinemann has produced more than 20 radio-documentaries for National Danish Broadcasting Corporation (DR).

Khin Maung Win, born 1966. As a student activist participated in nationwide democracy uprising in August 1988, and left Burma for Thai-Burma border after military coup in September the same year.

Minna Knus-Galán graduated from the University of Navarre, Spain (1987-92) with a Master's degree in journalism. Since 1992 she has worked as a reporter and a hostess of several current affairs programmes at the Finnish Broadcasting Company, YLE.

Kristin Aalen works as a journalist and film critic in Stavanger Aftenblad, Stavanger, Norway. She has during the last year been investigating 9.11 conspiracy theories in her daily newspaper.

Roman Shleynov is investigations section editor for Novaya Gazeta, Moscow, Russia, since 2006. Awards from the Russian Union of Journalists for investigative reporting and reporting on corruption.

David E. Kaplan is director of the International Consortium of Investigative Journalists, a network of nearly 100 reporters in 50 countries, sponsored by the Washington, D.C.-based Center for Public Integrity.

Dario Novalic, 44, started as a journalist on radio in 1984, has done documentaries on among other things alternative medicine and UN-troops. Was reporting on the war in 92-95. Editor of the Bosnian magazine START.

Mustafa Mustafic, 66, documentary film-maker from Bosnia. Has done cinematography on over 60 short/dramas/documentaries.

Loretta Tofani, a free-lance writer, is a veteran American journalist, based in Ogden, Utah. She worked for nine years as a staff writer for The Washington Post and 14 years as a staff writer for The Philadelphia Inquirer.

Murali Krishnan is currently the National Affairs Editor with Indo-Asian News Service, a New Delhi-based news agency where he investigates security issues and corruption

David Cay Johnston won a Pulitzer Prize for his innovative coverage of tax policy in The New York Times. After 40 years of investigative reporting, David retired from daily journalism this year.

Lars Weisæth (67); Professor of Psychiatry (psychotraumatology) at the Medical Faculty, University of Oslo. Senior Research Supervisor at the Norwegian Centre for Violence and Traumatic Stress Studies.

Vinod Raja works through a collective called Grass Roots Media, making films that focus on Livelihoods, Environment and Human rights. He graduated from the Film and Television Institute of India-FTI with a specialization in Cinematography.

David B. Smallman is a U.S. lawyer based in New York City where his practice includes media law, publishing, intellectual property, litigation, and complex insurance coverage disputes.

Tormod Strand is a television-reporter in NRK, where he has worked since 1990. He has made several documentaries. Last year he won the SKUP price for his work on cluster-weapons.

Geoff Kay founded Argent Associates, a training and consulting firm in 1983. Before that he was with the Liverpool and Essex police eventually becoming Chief Inspector and later a staff director of the Police College, Bramshill.