

...who's coming?

Palagummi Sainath is Rural Affairs Editor of The Hindu. He is the 2007 winner of the Ramon Magsaysay Award, Asia's most prestigious prize for Journalism Literature and Creative Communications Arts.

Valentin Thurn has since 1990 worked as director of TV documentaries with German and French-German channels and others. He has won various national and international Journalism and Film Awards.

Irene Jay Liu is currently a staff writer in the Capitol Bureau of the Albany Times Union, USA. She is also a correspondent with Center for Investigative Reporting in Berkeley, California.

David Ritscher is currently the Production Coordinator/Editor for Frontline/World. He has extensive experience in documentary production and editing, and has recently produced documentaries and segments for Frontline, Frontline/World, and NOVA, among others.

Olav Skaaning Andersen, born 1965, is Head of current affairs ("Deadline" and "Orienting") in DR (Danish Broadcasting Corporation). He is a former reporter, documentary filmmaker and Head of sport, DR, and former Sports Editor at Ekstra Bladet.

Niels Christian Jung, born 1970, is an investigative reporter and documentary film maker at DR (Danish Broadcasting Corporation). He has worked as a reporter at Ekstra Bladet, and was awarded Sports journalist of the year 2007.

Tim Large is deputy editor of Reuters AlertNet, the global humanitarian news website run by Reuters Foundation. He recently oversaw development of AlertNet for Journalists, a toolkit for reporters covering wars, natural disasters and health emergencies.

Nicky Hager is New Zealand's best known investigative reporter. He has published four books, including his 1996 expose of the Echelon intelligence system. He also lectures on investigative research techniques.

Jean-Philippe Ceppi is a producer for the investigative program «Temps Présent» on the Swiss Broadcasting Corporation (TSR). He received several international awards for «Warriors for Hire», shot in Iraq.

Vivienne Walt has reported widely for Time Magazine since 2003, from Iraq, Europe, and most recently the embattled Niger Delta and the Democratic Republic of Congo. She was twice nominated for the Pulitzer Prize for her reports from Africa.

Pia Thordsen is a journalist at TV2 Syd in Denmark. She is a board member of The Danish Association for investigative Journalism (FUJ) since 2000 and board member of Arab Reporters for Investigative Journalism (ARIJ) since 2005.

Rodney Pinder is Director of the Brussels-based International News Safety Institute. He is a former senior foreign correspondent and news executive for Reuters, spent four years as global Editor of Reuters Television News and 37 years covering international affairs.

Sonu Madhavan (33) is a photojournalist, and has spent the last five years working with global journalism and education of NGO's in India. Repeatedly he has been used as a fixer for foreign media companies to deliver footage and interviews locally in India.

Margo Smit works at KRO Reporter, an investigative television documentary series on Dutch public TV. She chairs the Dutch-Flemish association of investigative journalists VVOJ, and teaches investigative journalism on TV.

Susanne Reber was co-chair of the Toronto Global Investigative Journalism Conference 2007. Susanne is an investigative journalist with CBC News Investigative team. This past year, she's led projects on Censorship, Workplace Safety and Canadian citizens losing their citizenship

John Nicol has been a member of five different investigative teams, mainly at the CBC and Maclean's magazine. He is the winner of several national and provincial awards for investigative and enterprise work, and is a National Newspaper Award nominee.

Gavin MacFadyen is the Director of the Centre for Investigative Journalism (www.tcij.org) and Visiting Professor, City University, London. Gavin has been the senior producer-director of more than 40 World in Action programmes from 1970 to the present.

Andrew Jennings is the only reporter in the world banned from FIFA president Sepp Blatter's press conferences. His new book about FIFA is in 12 languages, despite an attempt in Switzerland to have it banned globally.

Alexenia Dimitrova is a special correspondent in the investigations unit of 24 Hours Daily, a Bulgarian newspaper. She has more than 23 years experience in journalism. Her favorite topics are Cold War era archives, corruption and money laundering.

Ides Debruyne is cofounder of the Dutch-Flemish Association of Research Journalists (VVOJ) and the Belgian Pascal Decroos Fund for Investigative Journalism. Nowadays he is trying to lay the foundations of a European fund for research journalism.

Stefan Candea has been an investigative journalist for the newspaper Evenimentul Zilei and has worked for the Romanian department of Deutsche Welle in Germany. He is a co-founder and vice-president of the Romanian Centre for Investigative Journalism.

Lowell Bergman is a producer/correspondent for the PBS documentary series "Frontline", and his career spans more than 35 years. He also teaches a seminar dedicated to investigative reporting at the Graduate School of Journalism at the University of California at Berkeley.

Siri Gedde-Dahl is a reporter in the business section of Aftenposten in Norway. She won the SKUP-Prize in 2005.

Anne Hafstad is a journalist and medical reporter in Aftenposten, Norway. She won the SKUP-Prize in 2000 and 2005.

Alf Endre Magnussen is a researcher/news librarian at Aftenposten, Norway. He is a computer assisted reporting specialist in the newspaper, and has earlier won the Norwegian investigating prize, the SKUP-Prize, in 1999 and 2005.

Louise Flanagan lives in South Africa and is a senior reporter at the daily newspaper The Star in Johannesburg. Louise worked for the "alternative" press during the apartheid years in South Africa.